ONE OF THE MODISH BROCADED SILK AND WOOL CREPPES.

If one desires a serviceable frock for various occasions, nothing could be a wiser choice than one of these pretty new creppes—light of weight and broadened in self-tones. Such is the material used for the pretty frock shown in the drawing. This was a rich wine color with full length raglan sleeves and rolling collar of self-toned taffeta. The blouse opened over a vest of chiffon taffeta and chiffon. The broad girde of taffeta was slightly lifted at the left side and held by a rowette of the same with pendant tassel of silk. The skirt is one of the newest of the draped models, the tulle draped in panner effect with a broad panel at the back.

DEATHS.

HARRISON DAWSON
Former Fayette Farmer Drops Dead at Charleroi.

Harrison Dawson, 75 years old, a retired farmer, died suddenly this morning at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Margaret Lancaster at Charleroi, with whom he was making his home. Mr. Dawson arose this morning at his usual hour apparently in good health. After a breakfast he went out to feed the chickens. Returning he sat down to read the morning papers. He died a short time later. No arrangements have been made for the funeral.

Mr. Dawson was born near Uniontown and was a farmer for a number of years. His wife who bore her marriage was Miss Elizabeth Kitchy, died about a year ago. The following children survive: Attorney William J. Dawson, Uniontown; George Dawson, Lutetia Dawson, James Dawson, Mrs. Lancaster and Mrs. Alice Leland, all of Charleroi. One sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Barnes of Connellsville, and one brother, William Dawson of Uniontown, survive.

The officers of the company are: President, John M. Stauffer; secretary, James S. Braddock; treasurer, Eugene T. Norton.

ITCHED FOR 20 YEARS, RESINOL CURED IN 10 DAYS

Baltimore, Md.—"About twenty years ago both my legs began to itch from ankle to knee. Little pimples came out. The itching and burning was something terrible. I would start to scratch and could not stop. I would even scratch through the skin and what of course would leave a sore which I was compelled to stop.

"I tried several prescriptions and treatments, but received not a particle of benefit more than if the treatments were cold water. I then began to have very little faith in anything and of course could do nothing but scratch away.

"After suffering constantly for twenty years, a friend recommended Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment. From the very first application, I found relief and was entirely cured in ten days. The itching and stinging sensations have ceased and my skin is as smooth as a child's." (Signed) Charles Warner, 1123 N. Stricker.

Every drugist sells Resinol Soap (25c.), and Ointment (50c. and $1).

Hoosier "White Beauty"

It Cannot Take You 10 Minutes to Decide Whether You Prefer "White Beauty" or a HOOSIER with "Oak" Inside—Delivered to Your Home for only $1.

It is necessary now that you make your decision quickly if you are to secure your Hoosier on the attractive HOOSIER PLAN, for there are only a few of each left on our floor.

This Opportunity Will End When the Last of this Allotment of Hoosiers is taken—Possibly TOMORROW.

Before you hesitate longer, therefore, ask yourself these three questions:

- (1) How can I possibly benefit by not getting a Hoosier now on the Hoosier Plan?
- (2) Can I not better afford to pay one dollar now than the entire cash price all at once later?
- (3) Shall I risk being too late, merely through failure to act now? Or shall I go down to the store tomorrow and make my decision then—knowing that the sale may close by night?

Consider the Advantages that the new Hoosier presents—40 tested features of convenience, 17 of which are entirely new—three spacious cupboards and a handy package pantry, grouped around a large sanitary metal table that slides out 16 inches so you can sit down and work—capacity for 400 articles which are so scientifically located at your fingers' ends that even unnecessary reaching has been eliminated—and construction so sound that the cabinet lasts a lifetime without warping or any necessity of repairs.

The Saving of Weary Miles of Steps in the kitchen, alone, makes the new Hoosier of vital importance to every tired woman who hopes to retain her health, happiness and good looks, for kitchen work done in the old way is drudgery, and drudgery sooner or later causes serious ills. The convenience and the pleasure of working with a Hoosier are great but insignificant advantages compared to the "health side" of the question. Particularly if you are one of the millions of women who never feel perfectly well, and don't know why, you need a Hoosier more than anything else you can buy.

See "White Beauty" in Our Window—It Will Sell Itself to You. And Here is the Easy Hoosier Plan on which You can Buy it Tomorrow.

1. $1 puts the cabinet you choose in your home.
2. $1 weekly quickly pays for it.
3. The Low Cash Price fixed by the factory prevails strictly.
4. No interest. No extra fees.
5. This sale is under the direct supervision of the Hoosier Company.
6. Your money back if you are not delighted with your Hoosier.

Could any possible further advantage be held out to induce you to act tomorrow in your own interest? We know of none, and we count confidently on your coming tomorrow—before it is too late.

THE TRUTH ABOUT OLIVE OIL

Spout arrangement fully patented

Canned at the place of production in Italy

There are a number of "Pure" Olive Oils on the market to-day. All the pure olive oils, however, are not First Quality olive oils! Simply to know that you are buying an olive oil marked "pure" is not enough. The fact that an olive oil is pure does not necessarily imply that it is fit for human consumption. There are several different grades of olive oils, regardless of their purity. There is but one grade of olive oil that should ever be used for table use or for medicinal purposes; that is the first pressing of hand picked, carefully selected olives.

When you buy a can of OLIVESE you secure the HIGHEST GRADE Olive Oil that can be had at any price.

FURNACES GOING OUT.

Decreased Activity in Pig Iron Made in China.

Further evidence of decreased blast furnace operations of the United States Steel Corporation last indicated a couple of weeks ago when 1,300 Erie coke ovens discontinued operations, is presented by the banking of the Luma furnace, Cleveland, of the American Steel & Wire Company. It is understood the company will blow out one of its Shoenberger stacks at Pittsburg this week.

The Carnegie Steel Company early this month blew out three furnaces and two of the National Tube Company's stacks are scheduled to go out shortly.

TUESDAY.

Just to show how prosperous we are under this Democratic administration the Connelville News prints an item advising that the United States Steel Corporation's plant at Green, Pa., up in Mercer county, which has been running 75% has been put on full time. There may be some mysterious reason for running this little plant full time, but its annual capacity of 50,000 tons will not make or unmake a nation's welfare.

Announcements of this character are so rare, however, that they have become important news, and our contemporary did well to print the item. The people have become heartily sick of hearing that this furnace or that mill has been shut down, or that this railroad or that corporation has passed its dividend. There was not much consolation in the fact that the United States Steel Corporation paid its dividend out of its accumulated surplus, it not having been earned in the business; or that other large steel companies, notably the Pennsylvania Steel Company, have been unable to pay any dividends to their stockholders; or that the pig iron manufacturers complain that they are losing money on every ton they produce north of the Ohio river, and that in forty years they have never witnessed such complete stagnation of the market.

But if these announcements of industries resuming or industries closing are only of relative interest to the people of Fayette county, they are, however, directly and immediately interested in the mills and mines of the Connelville region. They have observed that the mills of the United States Steel Corporation in this section have been closed down, and that many of the company's coke ovens have been put out of blast. They wonder why it is so, and our Democratic friends have a hard time explaining it.

Their attempts in this direction have not been very successful and the fact has made them feel that in their peaceful moments they have called the Republic in newspaper editor, names and have had the temerity to tell their readers that these newspapers are responsible for unsatisfactory business conditions. To such limits of absurdity have these apologists for a bad cause been put.

The Courier has been accused of exaggerating industrial depression for political effect. Nothing is further from the truth. In the Courier's code of prosperity comes before politics. We have not sought in any manner to magnify conditions. They are bad enough. We have mentioned them as a matter of public information. Incidents of our readers will recall they are pretty nearly what we predicted they would be if the Democratic party was placed in power and permitted to carry out its tariff notions. The Democratic press avoids this issue, and seeks to create and foster the notion that the Democratic tariff law has no connection with our mills and ovens by the light and conclusive argument of "Pork" Pugh and "Tut" Tut.

The Connelville coke business is a correct exponent of the iron and steel trade and of industrial conditions generally. The output of the region during 1913 averaged from 300,000 to 400,000 tons weekly until November, when it dropped down to 350,000 tons. In December it was 300,000 tons and in January to 250,000 tons. The Democratic tariff law went into effect in the fall of 1913, yet the Democratic organs would have us believe that this slump in the coke trade was purely accidental.

It will be recalled, however, that President Wilson about this time made his famous promise of "industrial peace." He indicated that business would no longer be disturbed by disquieting legislation; that the patient might now get down from the dentist's chair and have an opportunity to recover from the shock. In accordance with this gratifying intelligence, the steel and iron trade accepted happily with the tariff conditions and prepared to make the most of them. A spirit of optimism was developed. President Farrell of the Steel Corporation expressed the opinion that this would be one of the biggest years in the industry. A large number of idle ovens were fired up and the weekly coke output increased to 340,000 tons.

In February and as high as 380,000 tons in March, dropping to a steady weekly shipment of approximately 350,000 tons.

But the promise of industrial peace was not kept. The famous Five Brothers made their appearance in Congress. They have since been embodied in one bill to regulate corporations, big and little and indifferent, after the same manner in which the railroads are being regulated, only more drastic. Their effect will be that the Democratic administration will have a hand in administering everybody's private business.

It may be a matter of mere coincidence again, but since the development of these conditions the optimism of February and March has passed into pessimism and the result is reflected in the fact that coke shipments have dwindled again until they are down to less than 300,000 tons weekly.

These coincidences are getting rather tiresome to the Connelville region, but the explanations of the Democratic organs are not less so.

VINDICATION.

The election of John S. Carroll as county superintendent was a recognition of pedagogic ability. It was also a rebuke to the Democratic organization of Fayette county for trying to annex this office for political purposes.

Having been caught red-handed, getting it through the campaign, setting up the plan for the election of a Democratic superintendent, Chairman Sterling and his newspaper organ accused Chairman Crow of trying to elect a Republican superintendent.

Well, if he was he seems to have succeeded. Superintendent Carroll was appointed to this position upon the recommendation of Senator Crow, and the latter was much criticized for having secured the appointment, but the result yesterday shows that the appointment has the confirmation of the body charged with the duty of making county superintendents.

It is a vindication of both Crow and Carroll.

The Connelville News ran a newspaper across its front page yesterday on the Mexican situation, ignoring the fact that John S. Carroll had been elected county superintendent; yet we were led to believe from a careful perusal of the columns of our contemporary during the past couple of weeks that in its opinion the county superintendency was of first importance. All of which goes to show that the value of news is relative, and that display depends upon whether the large letters spell victory or defeat.

Dawson has no objection to the H. & C. railroad running through the town, but it is not like the idea of the railroad running over the town.

The youthful Connelville robbers will be sent away awhile to think over the matter of their offending. Their discovery and punishment will serve as a warning to a number of young men around town who have thought it easy to commit petty robberies and escape detection. Crime will out.

Richard Olney persists in declining office under the Wilson administration. Does he think he is too salt or the administration too fresh?

Connelville has a fine class for examination for mine foreman. The fact speaks well for the ambition of the young miners and the opportunities afforded them in the way of education by our local institutions. Good mine foremen are in constant demand, and in their ranks opportunity often waits.

It took three ballots, but the result was never in doubt.

Huerta is willing to arbitrate with Wilson, but Carranza is not ready to arbitrate with Huerta and Mexico City fears Villa more than it does American intervention.

First aid failed to save the Davidson suicide. The latter was just one lap ahead. It was a long lead. It meant nothing. First aid can do some wonderful things, but it cannot bridge the Stygian river.

If the Barefoot Boys do not make any better showing this fall than they did in the fight for county superintendency, there will probably be a side of second-hand organs in Fayette county.

Chairman Sterling couldn't fool 'em the second time.

Fayette county has a Republican county superintendent and a good one. The directors are to be congratulated on their good judgment and good sense.

Suicide by hanging threatens to become epidemic in this section.

Connelville will extend its cleanup policy to the City Hall's lone dungeon, and put that prison cell in proper shape for bad actors. Though a third-class city, it is the desire of Connelville to provide first-class accommodations for its transient guests.

The sideboard societies of Fayette county are to be regulated, too.

It is beginning to dawn upon Connelville dealers that selling cigarettes to minors is an unprofitable business.

It was non-partisan, of course, but the Barefoot Boys were all there.

It looks as if "Mike" Ryan had the Barefoot Boys on the run. We don't know a thing about it, but the more the News abuses the Irish the stronger we suspect the Irish are getting in the primary campaign.

The New Freedom seemed to work all right in the school directors' convention.

The A B C politics of the Barefoot Boys are getting X Y Z results.

PARAGUAY AND URUGUAY.

By GEORGE FITCH,

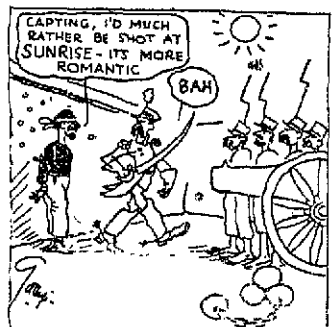

Author of "At Good Old Slush."

Paraguay and Uruguay are usually mentioned together like Tweedledum and Tweedledee. They are two South American countries which lie between Brazil and Argentina—this being their chief mission. For many years they quarreled continually. In 1870 Uruguay, Argentina and Brazil all jumped upon Paraguay and other well known and effective jostlers.

Paraguay is as large as Colorado and has about as many people. They are mostly Indians, diluted with a little foreign blood and varnished over with enough civilization to make them wear cotton shirts and trousers in summer when they do not need them. Uruguay is as large as Nebraska and has almost a million people, chiefly of Spanish descent. It is more prosperous than Paraguay and the use of schools and soap are much more tenderly understood.

Paraguay and Uruguay are republics, modeled after the ordinary American stock company in which the president runs things to suit himself. They were inoculated with freedom a hundred years ago, but it never took. If the ordinary citizen were to demand the privilege of voting against the particular president who is running either country, he would not be shot at sunrise, because that would be too long to wait. Presidents of both countries have been short-lived, as a rule, however, and urging them on to a better land has been a favorite diversion.

Both countries consist of broad plains, which grow cattle and horses in great abundance. Oranges are used for cattle food, thus showing the great need of an orange tree. The climate is so good that talking about the weather is an unknown art. Ocean steamers ramble up and down the Paraguay and Parana rivers, but an equal horror. For this reason we must not fear Paraguay as a business rival for some centuries to come.

"If the Ordinary Citizen Were to Demand the Privilege of Voting Against the Particular President Who is Running Either Country?"

GIVES HUERTA'S SIDE AND SAYS MEXICO COULD WAGE FIERCE WAR

Private Peace Commissioner Tells of Dictator's Vast Resources.

Describes Futile Mission—Lifting of Embargo on Arms Enraged Huerta.

"HUERTA hasn't begun to scratch the resources of Mexico. With out the assistance of a dollar of outside capital he could carry on his present campaign against the rebels for five years. If people in the United States realized that Huerta can raise $500,000,000 at any time with little effort, perhaps the prospect of armed intervention or war wouldn't be regarded as so much of a sky-lark for the American army and navy."

William H. Ellis, a New York capitalist and personal friend of General Huerta, made this statement to the Brooklyn Eagle and told how the great efforts of a self constructed peace commission, of which he was a member, were shattered by President Wilson's order lifting the embargo on arms in Mexico on the very eve of Huerta's compliance.

Neither General Carranza nor General Villa will ever enter the City of Mexico, least of all if the arms dispatches of a split between them are true. On the other hand, so long as the Wilson policy of nonrecognition persists, revolution will continue no long as there is a dollar left in Mexico or a horse or cow standing on four feet.

"It would be more honorable and, I imagine, safer for General Huerta to give his sword to an American general on a battlefield than to hand it over to either General Carranza or General Villa. At present it doesn't seem as if he were going to do either.

American Capital Tied Up.

"Intervention in the present crisis would create a very bad impression upon all South and Central America. Had President Huerta been recognized by the United States the revolution would not have been as strong as it is today and probably would have been put down altogether.

"At the present time $500,000,000 of American capital is at a standstill. It is bringing no interest. Next year the banks will begin to foreclose and the train of financial ruin that will follow will be appalling."

There are few Americans, says the Eagle, better qualified to talk under standingly of Mexico and its needs than Mr. Ellis. He is on the "inside" and has been so for the past thirty years. He was born on the Mexican frontier and spent his early days as a cowboy, later branching out into cattle, wool, hide and cotton trading.

Mr. Ellis, together with Dr. Bernabe Barrios, left secretly on Dec. 24 for the City of Mexico as a special peace commission to interview President Huerta and the leading Mexican chieftains and to present to them a proposition by which it was hoped peace might be brought about. In speaking of their negotiations, Mr. Ellis said:

"Our first interview with President Huerta took place at his private residence. It lasted practically all night, and the results of the first conference were cabled to New York. Actual negotiations were then begun which might have ultimately adjusted the Mexican situation, so far as Huerta and President Wilson were concerned, had not an unforeseen event happened which shattered completely the work we had done. At this particular moment General Huerta looked with favor upon any proposition that would bring about a closer and more friendly relationship between his government and that of the United States.

Huerta's Attitude.

"President Huerta expressed admiration for President Wilson. He said that he thought that Wilson was doing what he considered to be the right thing. But Huerta also said that no one could complain of the treatment of Americans and other foreigners by him. He hoped, he said, that the American people would find some way to recognize the Mexican government, as recognition meant an immediate end to the war, and the salvage of hundreds of millions of dollars worth of property and thousands of lives.

"Our definite suggestion was that a committee of twenty leading men, from both Mexico and the United States, should meet and draw up a plan for bringing about an agreement between the two countries. This plan, when drawn up, was to be laid before President Wilson and President Huerta for their approval.

"President Huerta seriously considered the proposition. He told us he appreciated our motives and that the idea was a good one. And then occurred an event which completely ruined the entire scheme.

"The embargo on arms was lifted for the rebels by President Wilson. Negotiations were immediately broken off by President Huerta.

"It is now a fight to the finish and to death," said President Huerta.

"Although President Huerta had not definitely committed himself at the time," continued Mr. Ellis, "it seemed as if the plan would go through. After the embargo on arms was lifted, however, General Huerta plainly was opposed to any peace scheme.

"It seems as if the government of the United States wants to allow us to exterminate ourselves," said President Huerta. "There is nothing I can do as representative of the Mexican government except to fight. It is no time to talk peace."

"As far as foreign capital is concerned the situation is truly appalling. More than $500,000,000 of American capital is at complete standstill, and before the end of the year the banks will probably begin to foreclose. Thousands of American residents will be forced to leave their homes. Their children were born in Mexico and brought up largely as Mexicans. They are Mexicans in everything except nationality. The present administration did not take into consideration that by ordering these thousands of Americans out of the country it was ruining them financially. They have no connections in this country, although it is their own. A lifetime's earnings are now at hazard in Mexico.

Huerta's Resources.

"In any discussion of Huerta's strength and the possibilities of his holding out indefinitely it is necessary to consider the immense financial resources at his command. How many persons know that Huerta can raise $500,000,000 at any time he desires? First of all, he has suspended the payment on all his bonded indebtedness and railroad bonds. He has doubled the taxes on all mortgages, stamps, mining interests and other properties. The government is now considering mortgaging or issuing a bond against the church property in Mexico, which under the law, is government property and aggregates between 3,000,000 and 5,000,000 pesos. The Catholic church in Mexico, as every one knows, is a full-fledged power. If the government issues bonds against church property the entire issue would be subscribed by the church.

"There are approximately 75,000 large haciendas, or ranches in Mexico. Huerta's government contemplates as a first step these 75,000 plantations about $7,500 each per year during the existence of the war, which would bring in a revenue of $562,500,000. Likewise there is being formulated a plan to tax all the water powers in the republic on a horsepower ratio basis. This would bring in about twenty or thirty million dollars. There are countless other sources of revenue that could be called upon. Each barrel of oil, every ton of ore from the mines, could be taxed, and the import and export duties could be raised.

"I believe that Huerta could whip the rebels in any pitched battle. This, however, would only prolong the revolution. The rebels would simply disband and break up into small groups. Instead of having 5,000 rebels in one place we would have hundreds, posing as revolutionists, roaming over the entire republic, robbing and murdering and committing outrage after outrage. The only way to quell revolution is to quell the revolutionists. This would mean turning Mexico into a vast slaughter house.

"There is one solution to the situation which has been suggested to those in intimate contact with Mexican affairs, but of which the general public, I believe, knows but little. If President Huerta should resign, and, going north, take charge of the army and fight the rebels, something might be accomplished. It has been suggested that he leave the presidency to Jose Lopez y Portillo y Rojas, his minister of foreign affairs, a man of great talent and ability. He has the respect of his enemies as well as his friends and would, no doubt, make an ideal president.

Who Will Succeed Huerta?

"In case the American government, with pressure or otherwise, eliminated President Huerta, who would be president in his stead?

"General Carranza is intelligent and clever, but I do not think Carranza has sufficient strength to control his forces. Should Huerta resign, he would be moved or defeated by the insurgents. He would still have such a great following that Carranza would have difficulty in bringing peace to the country. The federalists as they now stand constitute the real Mexican army. They have given years to military education and service and, of course, they would not consent to be governed by a man or a set of men who were apparently made overnight. The officers of the rebel army are intelligent men who have taken up arms for a cause which they consider a principle. If they succeed they will take full charge of the government, and the present executives with long years of military experience would be replaced by generals made on the battlefield.

"As for General Felix Diaz, he is a brave, honest, courageous young man, but whether or not he has enough forces now at his command to elect himself president is a question that the Mexican people can best decide.

The "Dark Horse."

"General Fernando Gonzales, son of ex-President Gonzales, is an intelligent general and would also make a good president. He is at present living in New York and is a man of ideas, honest and clever, although not a military man.

GENERAL GONZALEZ, A POSSIBILITY AS HUERTA'S SUCCESSOR.

"But there is a dark horse in the race. His name seems almost forgotten, and I dare say that the average newspaper reader has never heard of him. He is a man that has never encouraged a revolution. He was forced to leave Mexico during the early days of Madero's revolution and was forced to leave a second time, after General Huerta became president. He is honest, able and straightforward, and he would suit all factions. His name is Dr. Vasquez Gomez, and at present he is living in Washington.

"Mexico is not waiting for intelligent men. But it is in want of a military leader. The people are accustomed to being ruled by an iron hand."

HISTORY AND DESCRIPTION OF THE PORT OF VERA CRUZ

Quaint Cosmopolitan City Occupied by Americans in 1847.

Vera Cruz is the principal port in Mexico and was founded by the Spanish in the sixteenth century. It is about 100 miles from the City of Mexico and has a population of about 30,000. The city is built on low, sandy swampy ground and is only four feet above sea level. Until recently it was subject to epidemics of fever. Until the last five years the harbor was a dangerous roadstead, but the mole and breakwaters constructed by the Mexican government under Diaz have improved it until it is as safe as any on the east coast of Mexico. The city of Vera Cruz is defended by an old fort and the Castle of San Juan de Ulua, one mile from the mainland on an island, and also contains an arsenal, dry dock, shipyard, light-house and military prison.

The city itself is perhaps the quaintest and most cosmopolitan of the ports of Mexico and is a mixture of the ancient and modern. There are many fine new buildings and in some places these are set next to churches and dwellings that date from the Spanish occupation. The old buildings of the old walled city are mostly built of coral, and their domes and cupolas give a picturesque effect from the harbor.

Vera Cruz was in the hands of Americans in 1847, when General Scott captured it in the course of the Mexican war. As it is the harbor of the capital, it is an important strategic point. Sanitary conditions are now good, and the old time open sewers have been done away with. Asphalt is used very extensively for pavements, and only in the poorer districts are cobblestones still found.

There are many churches of interest and many relics of the early days when the Spanish used the city as their base of supplies in their warfare against the Aztecs. Later Vera Cruz was the port from which the "silver fleets" set forth to Spain. The last Spanish flag in Mexico was hoisted down from the fort in the harbor when the Mexicans revolted and drove the Spaniards out.

Tampico, with a population of about 17,000, is the second port of Mexico and is 225 miles northwest of Vera Cruz. The harbor is good, now that the breakwaters and jetties have been finished, and it is seldom that low tides delay navigation over the bar. The city differs in appearance from other Mexican towns. The roofs of the buildings are pitched and gabled instead of being flat. It is said that the government spent more than $3,000,000 on the custom house and piers, at which five steamers can load at the same time.

CHAPTER IX.

Thirty years of one way of living become a habit—so much so that it is almost a human impossibility to adjust oneself to any other mode of life. Mary Slade, living year after year with Dan Slade, interested in his work, watching him rise and succeed, had come to think of the man as only another part of herself. With him out of her life she felt as if a part of her own body had vanished without which she was restless and ill at ease.

As she sat in the little old cottage where with Dan she started out on married life, she experienced a feeling of detachment as if either this were not the right place, but some sort of inferior substitute, or as though the real and vital part of herself were absent.

The room was just the same as it was the day she and Dan had walked out of it to take up their new life in the handsome mansion in town. Not a thing had been changed or disturbed. The same crooked hatrack, with her old matted shawl hanging on one hook, hung behind the door. The same well-worn tides were carefully pinned on the plush-upholstered chairs. The same cheap little ornaments that so delighted Mary's simple heart in the old days still cluttered the mantel. The same near-crystal crowded the sideboard. The tablecloth remained laid from meal to meal after the time-saving custom of middle-class families.

Everything was the same but the atmosphere of contentment that once filled the room, everything the same but Mary's happiness in her husband's love. Outside the window the roses which Dan had helped her to plant still budded and blossomed in the sunshine that poured in a flood of golden joy through the windows of the shabby room and emphasized all the worn places in the comfortable old chair where evening after evening Dan Slade had sat reading his newspaper and dreaming of the great future he was confident the fate held in store for him.

In spite of herself Mary's thoughts were of her husband—the first bitter thought she had ever harbored against a man. She turned sick at heart at the thought of it. Dan and herself estranged, hopelessly at odds, fighting each other in the divorce court, fighting even over the possession of the little cottage that had shared in the first happy flush of their youthful love and happiness. This, the only place where she could find peace in her loneliness, Dan was trying to wrest from her. It was too near to town, too near to the scene of his new activities, he had sent word to her. She must vacate. She must go so far away that his charge of "desertion" would stand fire in a court of law.

Face to face with the fact that Dan was trying to drive her even from this shelter, trying to drive her out into a strange and alien world, of which she knew nothing and which knew nothing of her, Mary could scarcely believe that Dan was so changed—that even now he would be willing to snatch away from her the place which held the memory of happier days.

She had not seen her husband since the night in Senator Strickland's library, when the awful knowledge had been forced home to her that he not only wanted a permanent separation, but insisted on having an absolute divorce. Over and over again she thought, came into the woman's mind. It was tentative, ineffective. Try as she might, she could not see her husband.

It out of her thoughts. It was that over-recurrent feeling that another woman had entered Dan's mind and heart. Again and again she pushed it from her, but always and ever the obsession clung to her like a black shadow that haunted her during the day and persisted even in her dreams at night.

From the kitchen came the voice of her maid-of-all-work singing an old-fashioned tune.

It was one that in her young days Dan had loved to hear her sing—one whose sweet melody and melancholy sentiment he had loved in the days before his heart had become hard and his mind intense on the cold, hard problems of finances and political advancement. It was the song in which all lovers from the beginning to the end of time find a responsive note:

"Nita, Nita, be my own fair bride," Conscious of the song, Mary remembered the lamb stew that she had left cooking on the kitchen fire. Dan had always loved lamb stew; that is, he never failed to pass his plate for a second "helping," and how he used to look up at her and say:

"This is lapping good, Mary. I think I will have a bit more."

Just as if he needed any urging! Mary found her thoughts growing very tender when she suddenly remembered that tonight she must sit down alone at the table, that instead of two she would only serve one plateful of that stew. Her heart contracted with a pathetic, futile longing for things as "they used to be," and grew bitter as she remembered conditions as they were. She sat with her face pillowed on her arms, so absorbed in her unhappy reflections that she didn't hear the door open, didn't hear a step until someone leaned over and kissed her tenderly on the faded cheek that Dan used to pat so lovingly and declare was lovelier than their garden roses.

"Oh, Rob!" Mary exclaimed, starting up in glad surprise. "I didn't hear you drive up."

"I didn't," Bob laughed, good-naturedly. "My car is stranded two blocks back," and he threw his linen duster on the sofa as Mary hastened in her fond little way to take his hand and hover about him.

"It's strange how near town this place seems to be," Bob rattled on. "When we lived here before, it was clear out in the country, but with a motor car it's right next door to town."

"Well, auntie," and he stretched himself out in an easy chair, "I suppose it's like heaven to you to get back here to the old home you lived in so many years."

"Yes," Mary agreed, rather indifferently.

Any of the old neighbors left, I'd like to see them—some of 'em."

"I never noticed before how many questions old neighbors could ask," Rob. Mary sighed, as she recounted the curious visits of her old friends, who had inquired anxiously and repeatedly for Mr. Slade, how he was getting on, and when he would be down, and a dozen other questions in the phraseology of people who, as old friends, take the liberty of coming as near as possible to demanding that you unburden your soul to them on the spot. "You'll kind of have to dodge 'em, Bob. I don't know when, I've lied so. What do you think of a man who forces a woman to lie?"

"Well," Hayes hated the old subject, hated the thought of Mary dwelling continually on her unhappiness. "Didn't they know about Slade?" and he began to toy with the spoons of thread that Mary had been using for the inevitable sewing that had so annoyed her husband.

"Either they don't know or they want to find out more than they already know," Mary answered, wearily. "So I sit here lying and lying."

"You intend to stick it out and stay here?"

"Yes," Mary answered with a quiet determination.

"Well, he can't call this desertion," Hayes went on. "You own this house together. It's your home as well as his."

"Yes," agreed Mary, "but it's awful fighting my husband. What's the matter with you, Bob? You used to tell me a lot about Miss Strickland, and lately you—have you had any trouble?" she asked, kindly, forgetting her own sorrow at the thought of the possible unhappiness of this young man whom she loved as tenderly as if he had been her own son.

"Don't let us talk about her," Bob objected.

"All right, Robert," Mary attempted to be cheery as she saw how abstracted and dejected Bob was. "Dinner will be ready in a minute and you can sit right down."

"I won't give in to him!" she declared as she put on an extra plate and knife and fork. "I'll never give him that divorce."

"Don't you ever think of anything else?" Hayes questioned, soberly.

"No, I'm not. Robert, I get hot and cold hating my husband when I think how he is treating me. I know it's wrong, but I do! Sometimes when I wake up suddenly in the night and see the old room and remember that I'm living at his club and enjoying life and me here miserable, I just get sick hating him."

"Now, auntie," Hayes was anxious to divert her attention—"I wouldn't think of that. You have the best of him. You've got him beaten. I have a good lawyer for you, and he'll be out to see you today. You know I'd take the case myself, but it wouldn't be professional. You've positively made up your mind to fight the divorce to a finish."

"Tooth and nail!" Mary's answer came through set teeth.

"Then you've got him. He can't fight a woman in the courts in his position, with his nomination before him."

"I've got him, have I?" Mary was all rapturous now.

"You're sure of it? Was he very mad about my coming here? Has my lawyer seen his lawyer?"

Hayes answered the last of her many questions first. "They met today."

"Did you get me two lawyers, Rob?"

"Yes, I got two. I got a whole firm."

"Do you think I need another—so's to be sure?"

Hayes laughed.

"You have all you need, auntie."

"Thank God, I got the telephone in so they can call me up."

Mary was almost feverish in her excitement. "I couldn't go on the witness stand. He doesn't know that, though. Any signs of Dan going back to the house, now I'm out of it?"

The bell that never hesitates to interrupt at any moment rang insistently. Mary jumped about in her excitement and finally took down the receiver. She dropped it as hastily and backed away.

"You'd better answer it, Rob."

"It's Slade," Bob declared, holding his hand over the transmitter. "He wants to talk to you."

"Oh, he just called me a skunk and out of it," answered Mary, as he nonchalantly lighted a cigarette. He paced up and down the room for a moment and then turned on her.

"Go! I'd like to haul him through every court in the country. The scoundrel!"

"I don't like to hear you talk like that about him, Rob," Mary remonstrated. "He's been a pretty good friend to you."

"Well, perhaps," Hayes tried to calm herself for her sake. "He's all right, I suppose."

"I dunno that he is," Mary's mood was variable. "When I think of that divorce—"

"Slade's coming down here today," he declared. "You're here under his very eyes, and he's determined that you shall go away, and desert him and give him the opportunity to divorce you. He says the whole country will know of the trouble unless you go away. That's what he said over the phone."

"Well, I'll stay right here. I can't get over it, Rob," and her voice quivered in spite of herself. "I can't get over the suddenness of it, his wanting to divorce me. He says the whole country will know of the trouble unless you go away. That's what he said over the phone."

"The pen-up emotion of days broke, and Mary sank sobbing into a chair, burying her face in her hands. With the expression of the thought that herefore she had never admitted even to herself, her self-control vanished and she cried out desperately.

"Well, what do you think he wanted that divorce for so suddenly?"

"People usually do get divorced when they can't get on, don't they?" Hayes was willing to lie to shield her from the knowledge that he knew would be the bitterest part of all the wormwood that she had already tasted him.

"Sometimes I wonder," Mary continued, reflectively, "sometimes I'm almost positive that—No! Slade isn't that sort of a man, Rob."

"No, of course he isn't."

"No, I didn't know what I was going to say," she objected.

"Yes, I did. About women."

"He never noticed any other woman," she told herself positively.

"No," Hayes agreed.

"You haven't heard of anything like that, have you?" she questioned.

"No, no, I haven't." Hayes was finding the cross examination extremely trying, convinced as he was that Mary must be saved from the knowledge of Katherine at any cost. "If there were anything, you'd hear it. Don't worry."

"Robert," and she looked at him in astonishment. "Haven't you got enough trouble now?"

"But, Robert, you are my friend, aren't you? You ought to—"

He was saved from any further questions along that unwelcome line by the sound of the doorbell and a moment later Merritt opened the door without ceremony.

"Well!" Hayes was far from cordial.

"I beg your pardon for entering so abruptly," Merritt was the same old talkative, sunny good-fellow, the young friend of Mary's, but I was bound to see Mrs. Slade, I'm for the Slade family—but I'm for all the Slade family, so I hope you won't make a stranger of me."

Mary was politely indifferent and Hayes, with back turned, was tapping his foot uneasily on the floor. Altogether not the warmest welcome a man ever received.

"This man is likely to publish anything you may say, auntie," Hayes warned over his shoulder.

"Oh, come now, Hayes," objected Merritt. "I'm here on a perfectly friendly visit. I will remember this little place," and he looked about.

"You Are Going to Oppose the Divorce?"

stopped here some years ago and Mr. Slade brought us a drink of water. Slade was in his shirt-sleeves, I remember. Big man, Slade!" and he stared Mrs. Slade inquiringly. "Big man!" he exclaimed again as Mary remained silent, her features giving no clue to her feelings.

"Well, my wife has gone off to Europe on a long-extended tour," Merritt was determined to make conversation. "I had to do it alone. I'm quite alone. In fact, we're in the same boat—alone."

"I'm not," Hayes burst forth. "Thank God, I've got my troubles, but I'm not married, so I'm not quite alone."

Merritt laughed good-naturedly, glad at any kind of response.

"Pardon me, Hayes," he cleared his throat nervously. "I'd like to talk with Mrs. Slade."

"Oh, all right," and with his hands thrust into his pockets, Hayes strolled leisurely into the kitchen.

"My dear little woman," Merritt began in his most engaging manner, as soon as Hayes had left the room. "You have my deepest sympathy and most profound respect. Your position is touching, if you'll excuse me for saying it. I can see your side of it, too. Now the point is this: A week ago when you called at the senator's house, Slade had just said you were going West to live permanently. I must say very few women—very few—would do as much for a man. For instance, Mrs. Merritt, I know, wouldn't. I needn't tell you that the whole community will admire you for your reserved dignity—if you go, Mrs. Slade."

"I'm not going," Mary's voice was ominously quiet.

"You're going to oppose the divorce?"

"Yes," came the soft answer.

"Mrs. Slade," Merritt began, and took a quick, apprehensive look in the direction of the kitchen. "Take a hint from me! You give it to him! Soar it to him! He's used you like a dog! I came here today to find out if you meant to fight him. I had an idea that you did. I'll help you do his up."

"You're talking against the man I lived with most of my life," and she fixed an angry eye on him. "You get right out of my house, sir!"

"But—" protested Merritt, rising. "Go right along, sir. Go along!" and Mary raised her voice as her temper got the better of her.

Hayes, hearing the loud tones, appeared at the kitchen door munching a biscuit.

"How dare you!" he heard Mary exclaim. "You can't abuse my husband to me!"

Merritt looked once at Hayes and once at Mary. Then he went.

Hayes stood taking large bites out of the biscuit, looking at Mary with an amused smile.

"I'll say all I want about Slade," Mary sputtered. "But I won't let anyone else do it."

"I've noticed that," returned Hayes, dryly.

"And I can tend to my own affairs, too."

"I've noticed that, too," still dryly.

"I'm kind of wound up," Mary confessed. "I'll just wash my face and cool off. Then we'll have dinner, Rob."

She had no sooner left the room than a knock came at the door. It appeared to be Mary Slade's day "at home."

"Oh, the day—"

He started toward the door. "These d—d curious neighbors!"

He opened the door abruptly. Instead of the gossiping neighbors he had expected he was confronted by Katherine Strickland.

(To Be Continued.)

Too Commercial.

"Remember that this is a commercial age, said a colleague of Senator Sherman, in justification of the doubtful practices of a certain magnate."

"A little too commercial," Senator Sherman replied. "Take the artist's experience."

"A picture dealer entered a well-known artist's studio in Boston the other day and bargained for a large canvas—a landscape of meadowland and cattle. When the price was agreed on and paid, the dealer took out his knife and, to the artist's horror, with one sweep of the blade, cut the canvas in two."

"There now," said the dealer complacently. "I have two pictures, one of beautiful meadowland and a lake, the other of an interesting group of cattle. I can get for each about what I paid you for the whole canvas. Now just sign this half, too, please."

Her Quest Ended.

An elderly lady from the country one day decided to adopt two children from the county orphan asylum.

She walked several miles before reaching the car line. It was the first time she had been on a car. She stared wide-eyed at everything she saw, then her gaze stopped on a sign.

"The Ohio Traction company—Children under twelve years of age 2 cents, or two for 5 cents."

"Well," she said, "that is the best bargain ever." Calling the conductor she said: "Young man, I'll take two of those children for 5 cents right now, a boy and a girl, please."—National Monthly.

RUNDOWN FOR YEARS

Strength Restored by Vinol.

Strength and even life itself depends upon nourishment and proper assimilation of food, and unless digestion is sound the whole body suffers.

Mrs. C. W. Busby of Mountville, W. Va., says: "After years I was in a weakened, run-down condition, and I could not find anything that would help me. Vinol was recommended and I tried it. Before I finished the first bottle I was better. I continued it and am as well as ever. I have gotten several neighbors to take Vinol with the same result."

We know the great power of Vinol, its delicious red fruit and cream without out, in building up all weak, run-down persons, and for chronic coughs, colds and pulmonary troubles, and that is why we guarantee to return your money if it does not help you. Get Vinol at C. C. drugstore, Connellsville. Vinol is sold in West Side by Fred H. Hammann, druggist.

P. S. For Saxe Solvo is truly wonderful for Rheuma. We guarantee it.—Adv.

Health a Factor in Success.

The largest factor contributing to a man's success is undoubtedly health. It has been observed that a man is seldom sick when his bowels are regular—he is never well when they are constipated. For constipation you will find nothing quite so good as Chamberlain's Tablets. They not only move the bowels but improve the appetite and strengthen the digestion. They are sold by all dealers.—Adv.

June Patterns PICTORIAL REVIEW New style book for summer

It's very important that you see the summer styles as shown in the Style Book, the most widely read publication of authoritative fashions. It is just as important that you use Pictorial Patterns; they are true guides to perfection in dressmaking—simple, easy to follow, resultful and economical. The well-informed 'Pattern Girl' will give you valuable assistance.

Strikingly Beautiful Silks

No one can doubt that it is a season of wonderful silks, when they look at the novel colors and quaint designs that mark the largest-ever variety this good silk store is showing. There's no end to the clever effects that can be produced with a combination of plain colors and the new stripe, plaid, check and floral designs. We have collected a magnificent stock of absolutely correct silks to be used for the fashionable two-piece costumes; the gowns and the frocks for day and evening wear; the suit blouses, negligees and other apparel of summer—underwear included. Also, there's special silks for trimmings and linings; sashes and girdles. Here they are:

TAFETAS—Plain, black and colors. A yard $1.50. MOIRES—Lovely water effects; sound grades, $1.25 to $4.50.

CREPES—Moccasin, Canton, plain Crepe de Chine, $1.75 and $2.00.

PRINTS—Crepe, Taffeta and Bengaline, $1.50 to $5.

POPLIN—A mixture of silk and wool. A yard $1.35. MESSALINE—Twenty-some shades and black and white, $1.00.

WASH SILK—Delicate and deep colors on white $1.00.

BERBER—A "crepe-y" weave, rich and long wearing, $1.25.

Bridal Silks The fashionable weaves in pure white. In preparation for late spring weddings, the silk store has assembled the various good weaves that are being used this season. They are chosen with great care and marked at moderate prices. Among them—Crepe de chine, crepe moccasin, charmeuse, crinkled crepes, broche crepe, moire and Bengaline. Prices are $1.50 to $2.50 a yard. These same weaves can be had in evening shades for bridesmaids' dresses.

Wright-Metzler Company in Uniontown

has made emphatic price reductions to lower stocks before the workmen begin building two additional floors and making extensive alterations in June. Women's clothing and millinery in the two stores is identical and priced alike at both places. In these departments in the Connellsville store prices have been lowered to match those in Uniontown—a distinct service to a large clientele of buyers who shop between the two stores. Savings are as big here on certain dresses, suits, coats, waists and other apparel as in the other store—and the merchandise is equally new, fresh and fashionable. Today, following the price-change in Uniontown, the millinery store has to offer:

Our Newest $11.00 to $13.50 Hats are Now $10

Just arrived and in the styles to wear the summer through. Distinctive, full value millinery in Panama, hemp and split Milan. New color-tones—burnt, green, purple, and black and white. New trimming ideas worked out in ribbons, flowers, foliage, ostrich, pompons, wings and stick-up conceits. Lovely hats, indeed, and only under-price to match those of Uniontown.

Other Hats in Late Style Trimmings for Women and Children

The new, smart-looking shapes; the newer color-effects and black. Trimmings of pompon flowers, ribbons, foliage and what not. Exquisite styles for children; becoming styles for women.

Certain $5.50 and $6.00 Hats. $4.19

Lot Misses' $4.00 and $4.50 Hats. $3.19

Children's $3.00 and $3.50 Hats. $2.19

New Full Head Ostrich Plumes.

$6 grade, black, white and colors. $4.93

$9 grade, new colors, big, fine. $7.95
